Cyrus is a continuation in a suite of font designs that aim at testing new forms and styles in the serif style. While the sans serif variant has seen a large number of attempts at breaking new ground in base forms and construction, serif fonts often rest on the tremendous heritage the forms conveys. The base skeleton was the first major break in style, choosing a narrow, squared form with a high x height. This structure is coupled to a dark serif, mixing influences from antique and egyptian forms. One highlighted issue was work the base forms away from the mechanical structure to avoid too much rigidity and equally help the legibility. This was also a major contributing factor to the decision to add a true italic form that would break from the regular shapes and also add a softer, more literary style to the family.

During the work on the letterforms, cyrillic designs often popped up due to their constructed form and the decision was made to aim to expand the base character set to include more encodings. Not only would the overall family gain in usability but the move equally suited the desire to create a modern serif design and multi-platforms solutions are very much a contemporary issue, even for us in our local projects.

The resulting family is a condensed, rigid design aimed at conveying modernism and structure that can be used both in text or title settings. With a series of supported languages, the Cyrus family can be used for a large array of mediums. Available in two weights with accompanying italics.
